【Period of exhibition : Tuesday 3rd November 2020 (Holiday) to Sunday 24th January 2021】

* Closed every Monday (When Monday is a holiday, the following day) and over the year-end and New Year season (28th December to 1st January)

A collection of porcelain, mainly Old Imari, held by Loosdorf Castle outside Vienna, Austria. Almost all of the collection was damaged when the castle was taken over by the former Soviet army at the end of World War II. After the war all the fragments were stored and put on view in the castle, and now some 150 pieces including some partially restored items are being exhibited overseas for the first time.

"The hotel with its own museum"

Standing alongside the two towers of The Okura Tokyo, the Okura Museum of Art faces onto Okura Square and completes the world of Okura. As a hotel with its own museum, The Okura Tokyo offers visitors and guests an interval of richer experience. With this linked project that picks up on the theme of the exhibition, the hotel once again creates a sense of unity offered by no other hotel.
